

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

By conducting etching treatment using at least two steps with different compositions of gases for each step, and at least one step comprising using a gas capable of decomposing and vaporizing etching products in an etching apparatus continuously, semiconductor devices can be produced with high productivity, low contaminant and good reproducibility of treatment state.